

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is dangerous. When a business can determine what information citizens are allowed to receive in something as important as a national election, it's time to limit those powers of determination.

No one seriously believes that we hear any attempt at unbiased news anymore. The least the Federal Communications Commission can do is control the ability of any one corporation to smother or promote its own political agenda on the airwaves that my fellow citizens and I provide through our taxes. Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
